

Open Call for Youth Delegates

Call for participants

The No Oblivion Youth Delegates Network (YDN)

Are you passionate about human rights, history, and peacebuilding? Do you have a keen interest in preserving the memory of significant historical events and ensuring that future generations learn from the past? Whether you have a personal connection to the former Yugoslavia conflicts—perhaps through family or heritage—or a strong commitment to understanding and advocating for peace, we invite you to join our Youth Delegates Network (YDN) and play a pivotal role in shaping the narrative around these important historical events. Together, we can honor the memories of those affected and work towards a future grounded in reconciliation and understanding.

As part of the YDN you will have the possibility to be chosen as one of the 3 network representatives and take part in the No Oblivion Multigenerational Live Debate where you will engage in deep conversation with witnesses, victims and / or their descendants of the former Yugoslavia conflicts. You will also have the opportunity to be actively involved in other project activities.

You're the right person if

- you are aged 18-30;
- you are a graduate or undergraduate in Law, Criminology, International Relations, Political Science, History, Security Studies, Philosophy (Political and Moral Philosophy), or Sociology;
- your academic interests cover topics related to 20th-century history of the Western Balkans, especially the Yugoslav wars, the collapse of communism, peacebuilding, reconciliation in post-Yugoslav societies, oral history, and the role of international courts, human rights advocacy, conflict resolution, war ethics, and the documentation and memory of the war

Interested in joining the YDN and have a meaningful impact on European heritage and human rights?
